

Rachel Scott

A conscientious and intelligent professional who exhibits creativity and flexibility in teaching children with learning differences is interested in positions teaching preschool to elementary age children with special needs. She has a B. S. in Elementary and Special Education from Millersville University. She has taught life, language and academic skills through daily living activities to preschool twins with autism, and collaborated with wrap around services and family to develop and implement a behavior plan. She works for an on-line charter school teaching. She has implemented Community Based Instruction and planned and taught multiple reading and math groups. She has engaged student in age appropriate activities in the home and in the community. She currently is working on how to teach environmental science.